DYSPEPSIA.

Is that misery experienced when we suddenly become aware that we possess a diabolical arrangement called a stomach. The stomach is the reservoir from which every fibre and tissue must be nourished, and any trouble with it is soon felt throughout the whole system. Among a dozen dyspeptics no two will have the same predominant symptoms. Dyspeptics of active mental power and a bilious temperament are subject to Sick Headache; those, fleshy and phlegmatic have Constipation, while the thin and nervous are abandoned to gloomy forebodings. Some dyspeptics are wonderfully forgetful; others have great irritability of temper.
Whatever form Dyspepsia may take, one thing is certain,
The underlying cause is in the LIVER, and one thing more is equally certain, no one will remain a dyspeptic who will

It will correct Acidity of the Stomach, Expel foul gases, Allay Irritation, Assist Digestion, and, at the same time
Start the Liver to working, when all other troubles soon disappear.

"My wife was a confirmed dyspeptic. Some three years ago by the advice of Dr. Steiner, of Augusta, she was induced to try Simmons Liver Regulator. I feel grateful for the relief it has given her, and may all who read this and are afflicted in any way, whether chronic or otherwise, use Simmons Liver Regulator and I feel confident health will be restored to all who will be advised."—WM. PIANOS.

GAINED FIRST PREMIUM FOR GREATEST merit at the New Orleans Cotton Centennial and WORLD'S Exposition for refined and wonderful power of tone, elegance of design, and superb finish. Only piano endorsed by United States commissioners, from each of the States. Cases finest carved, rosewood finish—finest imported double repeating action—three strings throughout of best patent steel wire—keys best ivory. Our new patent steel tuning device, instead of wood, is the greatest invention ever made in pianos. It consists of stationary STEEL tuning pins that are set in a mold and molten STEEL is run round the pins keeping them solidly in place. A thimble or shell pin is made to exactly fit the stationary pin revolving therein; thus the strings wind round the pins. After the strings are properly stretched the piano can never get out of tune, the rest plank being of STEEL not affected by extremes of climate. This will be appreciated by all musicians in city or country. It will stand twenty years without tuning and is good for 100. No other piano has this improvement.
Great strength and durability is another advantage. In other pianos holes are bored in wooden boards and tuning pins inserted. The pins turn round in this board and cannot stand permanently in tune, and it often cracks, splits, dries out, becoming utterly, totally and entirely worthless as a musical instrument. Our STEEL tuning device is in no way affected by such casualities, and the sounding board is so constructed that our pianos can never become thin or metallic in tone. They are always in tune and the expense of tuning is saved. This patent alone is worth millions and makes our piano the greatest in the world. Prices are no higher than other pianos. Buying direct from us, the largest manufacturers, you save $100 or $200—dealers' profits. Don't mind the ominous growlings of dealers and agents, who see their chances of selling a poor piano at a big profit of $200—slipping away—pity them.
We guarantee our pianos ten years. 200 styles. We have put our prices at lowest bed-rock for Cash.

A $600 Piano for $259.50; a $900 Piano for $287 50; a $1200 Piano for $375.50; a $1500 Piano for $475.50.

Upright Cabinet Grands, with stool and rubber cover shipped on board cars at S. F., to any part of the United States, Canada or Mexico. Our terms are cash with order. If not as represented money returned. We occasionally have good second-hand pianos, made over at $100 to $300, which we take in part payment for our own. Write or call for catalogue, free.

ON THE BLUFF.

O grandly flowing river!
O silver gliding river!
Thy springing willows shiver
In the sunset as of old;
They shiver in the silence
Of the willow whitened islands,
While the sun bars and the sand bars
Fill the air and wave with gold.

O gay, oblivious river!
O sunset kindled river!
Do you remember ever
The eyes and skies so blue
On a summer day that shone here,
When we were all alone here,
And the blue eyes were too wise
To speak the love they knew?

O stern, impassive river!
O still unanswering river!
The shivering willows quiver
As the night winds moan and rave.
From the past a voice is calling,
From heaven a star is falling,
And dew swells in the bluebells
Above her hillside grave.
—Washington Post.

A LITTLE MAVERICK.

All that hot August day there had been a cloud of dust in the east like a column of smoke. No breath of air stirred it, nor did it seem to advance a yard. The sky was a steely blue, the air quivered like the white heat from a cauldron of molten metal. In the crisp and dry buffalo grass myriad insect life gave to the simmering air a dreamy, monotonous sound like the humming of far away bees.

The afternoon passed, darkness gathered and with the rising moon came a cool wind from off the snow crested peaks. The cloud of dust subsided and revealed a line of moving, white covered wagons.

As the caravan drew near a gaunt prairie wolf rose suddenly out of the grass, gave a long, dolorous howl and fled across the plain. After him, as if they had risen from the earth by magic, went a pony and rider, a bronzed, grizzled old man, as gaunt and evidently dreading the new comers as much as the wolf.

The caravan, numbering thirty wagons, went into camp in the form of a hollow square, the people and animals inside the barrier of wagons. The sound of voices, the smell of cooking, the laughter of children and the red glow of the camp fires made a bit of welcome life in the solemn land, breaking the soundless monotony of centuries.

Later, when the fires were low and when the only noises were the champing of the animals and the tread of the sentry on watch, a strange, elfish figure ran out of the stockade and began to dance in the moonlight—a girl of 12 or thereabouts, with big, sparkling eyes and short, black curls flying over her pretty brow. A bearded face was thrust out under a wagon cover and a gruff but not unkindly voice called:

"Come in, you Maverick. Want Injuns to git ye?"

The child laughed mockingly and continued her dance. After the third call the big man jumped out of the wagon and ran after her. When she could run no longer she dropped like a log, remaining stiff and still, while he carried her to the wagon.

"Gritty, ain't she, marm?" he said.

The lady addressed was a tall, thin person with a wrinkled face, sharp black eyes behind spectales, corkscrew curls, and a habit of wearing little shoulder capes in the hottest weather. She was a New England school teacher going west to better herself.

"'Gritty' is western, I presume, Mr. Chase," said the lady, Miss Mary Ann Reed. "What on earth do you call her Maverick for?" Miss Reed clicked her needles viciously. She knitted all day, jolting in a corner of the wagon, a picture of martyrdom.

"In my kentry, Texas," said Chase, "they calls them stray cattle that don't git branded Mavericks; they don't b'long to no herd, an' them that finds gits 'em."

"She's got folks in Denver," said Miss Reed.

"I dunno," whispered the man, with an anxious look toward the sleeping child. "A feller that met me two days ago on the east bound wagon train told me her pa and ma had died suddenly, an' the children had scattered, an' he'd never heered o' Janet at all. Her grandmarm hed kep' her from a baby, an' the old lady dyin', Janet's uncle jest shipped her off to Denver, where her folks was livin'. Don't seem nobody to take her."

"Why didn't you send her back with those folks?" asked Miss Reed.

"'Cause they was only harf way, an' was short for grub; they wouldn't take her."

Yet the Maverick was a great pet on the journey. Every one liked her and welcomed her bright presence to the wagons. Around the camp fires even the men gathered to hear her sing the quaint old hymns her grandmother had taught her. She held tired babies till her little arms were numb, she told stories to weary children and was a ministering angel at every wagon—at the last one in the train most of all.

This wagon had joined the train in Missouri, and belonged to an unfortunate family that Chase called "Pikes." The father, a sullen, sickly man, drove the four lean oxen; the mother, half dead from malaria, seldom lifted her head from her bed; and the nine children, practically orphans, too's care of themselves and of a little, motherless girl, sent out with this family to her father in Denver.

This baby, Rose, was a merry little creature of 3, beautiful and winning and much liked. But the days were toilsome ones, and as the Browns had charge of her no one interfered, though many of the party wondered who could have trusted her with them.

The two youngest Browns, homely, faded little souls, were faithful guardians over her. The other children were unruly and rude, but these two seemed like some good old folks who had lived out well rounded lives and been translated back to earth to begin over again.

To these children Janet's presence was the one happiness of their day, nor could she tell stories enough to satisfy them. Once Janet, coming unobserved, heard the youngest Pike telling baby Rose, who was cross, one of her own stories.

"You sorrerful little things," cried Janet, "can't you make 'em up yourselves of your own?"

For a week at night the sentry at the stockade saw far off, black, moving specks on the horizon, and weary and anxious were the hours of darkness, early the start, eager the hope to get on without the attack. Each man would mutter in the gray dawn, as haggard and white he harnessed his team, "Thank God, another night of peace; no Indians yet!"

"Janet," said Chase one morning, when she came to watch him harness his team, "ef them Injuns comes an' gits the better o' us you git on that ere leetle gray pony, Nance, thor, an' take Rose an' set out fer them low hills 'cross thar."

"Nance likes me; I feed her my bread."

"All of us like ye, ye Maverick, ye're so chipper allus," Chase said, admiringly. "The Injuns sha'n't git ye ef we kin help it."

That day a young wife was sick, and all the long hours Janet tended the wailing baby its mother was too ill to care for. She looked back at the line of wagons and thought of baby Rose, that she loved best of all.

"Those good little Pikes will see to her," she thought, hopefully. But the two little Pikes were weary that day—they lay in a strange stupor, those pathetic guardians—and no one noted them. Locked in each other's arms they lay unheeded, and one was drifting away beyond earthly aid.

At the night halt Janet, freed from her charge, ran for Rose. Then the news flew from wagon to wagon. The child was gone, and no one had seen her all day. Miss Reed remembered seeing her running among the sunflowers at breakfast time.

"Ain't nobody going for her?" cried Janet, in agony. She ran to each wagon, to be met with the same answer, "It cannot be done."

"You see, Janet," said Chase, a sob in his voice, "there's fifty women an' children here an' only thirty men to guard 'em; there may be hundreds of Injuns out there. We daren't leave camp or they'll know it, an' we've searched all the plains with a glass an' there's no sign of her."

"But ter-morrer"— choked Janet.

"She'll not be a-wanderin', missy—don't ask me to tell ye, but there's Injuns an' perarie wolves."

"We must only tell her father she died—never the whole truth," said Miss Reed, coming to the wagon for her rubbers, which she wore on the driest nights.

Chase walked away and sat down by the fire. "No, don't talk no more, Janet," as the child went to him, "it aren't no use. I'm the only old Injun fighter in camp. I've got ter take the lead."

Janet went quietly to her wagon. By the light of a flickering candle she printed, in a round, childish hand, on a bit of paper, these few words:

Mr. Chase, i am goin' to find Rose an' take Nance. I ain't no good in fightin' Injuns, an' I heard you say my folks was dead. Don't you come for me 'cause they need you. They don't me that is only a Maverick. JANET.

She pinned this note to his blanket, then went softly out in the starlight to the corner where Nance stood. Fearlessly she blanketed the animal, fastened the surcingle, then led her quietly out to an open space between two wagons.

She looked back at the dying camp fires, the group of men sleeping in the light of them, their guns by their sides, the silhouettes of the women against the wagon curtains, Miss Reed's prim and queer with the funny curls. How safe it was here, how lonely and dreadful outside! She climbed on the pony and turned her head toward the east; the animal, thinking of her home, struck into a run. The sentinel saw Nance disappear in the darkness, but did not note the little rider.

"That onery gray pony as ain't been worked all the way hev got loose an' gone," he said to the crowd of excited men who ran out at the noise.

Every unusual rattling of gravel under Nance's hoofs quickened the beating of Janet's heart; every dark object was to her a beast of prey; every sound the coming of the red men. She thought of the old time stories of Indian warfare and cruelty her grandmother had told her; of the horrors of the plains the men spoke of by the camp fires.

"But I'm the only one in all that train as hasn't anybody to care for me," she said, bravely. "There was only me to be spared."

When the moon rose it showed no living object on the great plains. The camp was far out of vision, and not even a spark from its fires glimmered on the still air. Absolute quiet and solitude; the world asleep.

At the top of a little rise in the road Janet halted to rest her tired horse, and once more to look around the lonely land. The quivering of Nance startled her, and peering ahead Janet saw a thrilling sight she never afterward forgot.

There in the moonlit road stood baby Rose, her yellow curls disheveled, her face tear stained and dirty, her gown torn, her little feet bare and bleeding. She still clung to her flowers that had led her astray.

Near the child a lean wolf sat on his haunches, regarding her with a profound and melancholy stare.

At the sight of the pony the wolf gave a weird howl, turned and trotted swiftly across the plains. The child with a wild cry ran forward.

"I knew you'd turn, Janie. I losted all day an' hung'y, an' the doggie comed an' singed. I had a doggie once, Bounce, where mamma was. Oh, I want my mamma!"

Janet held her close, kissed her tears away and then she gave her the food she had brought—her own supper. She lifted her to the pony's back, led Nance to some low hills that might give them shelter and there waited patiently for daylight.

"I never knew nights was so long before!" sighed Janet, holding Rose in her tired little arms. "Nance is laid down an' asleep. Only me awake, an' I must keep watch for wolves an' Injuns. Now the moon's goin', too, an' it gets lonesomer. I'll say all the hymns I know to keep me awake an' brave."

Try as she would her head would droop, the words grow confused and weary. As the moon sank and the chill increased, the shivering child covered Rose with her own skirt, and then to keep warm and awake walked up and down beside her.

"What was it, that low, trampling sound, coming louder and nearer so fast? Janet caught up Rose and ran back to the hill; the horse followed, trembling in every limb. Just beyond the hill in a furious gallop came a mass of horses, and dimly amid the fog of dust about them Janet saw the forms of their Indian riders.

"Joe said Injuns was wuss'n wolves!" sobbed Janet. "Dear Lord, let them go on an' not find us!"

The Indians passed on, their paths marked by clouds of sand that helped mercifully to hide the children.

"They're gone!" cried Janet; but hardly were the words uttered when there came another louder trampling, the clicks of arms against saddles and more horses—hundreds of them it seemed to Janet—and then, bringing joy to her heart, an American voice calling "Forward!" as the cavalrymen pressed on after the retreating Indians.

The danger having passed the tired child fell asleep with Rose in her arms. When she woke it was bright sunlight. Her dazed eyes saw Nance feeding near by, Rose running toward her and an oldish man, with a gray beard and bronzed face, looking at her kindly. By his side was the lean wolf Rose had called a dog.

"I knew it was a tame one!" cried Janet.

"In course you did," smiled the old man. "Me an' my gal, Ann Reed, fell out twenty odd year ago 'cause I owned a tame b'ar. She went ter Bosting, turned schoolmarm, an' I emigrated to Iowy."

Janet, very wide eyed, told him about Miss Reed, who was one of their wagon party. She also gave her own history and Rose's as far as she knew.

"Wall, you be a powerful talker!" cried the old man. "Now come eat, an' then we'll ketch up with the caravan. Say, though, sis, would you say, 'lowin' fer age an' my whiskers, Ann Reed ain't no better lookin' then me?"

"You're both nice for old folks," said Janet, politely.

He led them to a dugout in the hills where they found plenty to eat, and then they set out for the wagons, Janet with Rose on Nance, the wolf following the old man's bronco.

"The row last night, sis," he said, "was Uncle Sam's sojers arter the Injuns, same as has been hangin' round yer train. Wonder how them serious ways of Ann Reed's would 'a' took with Injuns?"

At night they reached the camping place of the wagons, where there was great rejoicing, Chase especially coming often to stroke Janet's curls and mutter, "Ef you ain't a borned here I never knowed one! The stuff of a pioneer!"

Janet's only sadness was that one little grave where the youngest "Pike" lay. The child had died the night before. How many nameless graves, tiny ones, there used to be on that great pathway to the west!

When Janet, with Rose in her arms, climbed into her wagon the hermit approached and said mysteriously, "It's the same Ann Reed, sis, an' she's there a pettin' that wolf like he were a poodle dorg. Ain't set agin 'em no more."

Two miles from Denver they met a horseman, so pale and anxious they knew who he was even before he called hoarsely:

"Is my baby with you?"

"Aye, she be," answered Chase, "but we'd met ye with blank faces an' sorrerful hearts but for Janet here."

Then he told the story, and his father got down from his horse to kiss her first—before his own child.

"I'm well off, Joe," he said, brokenly. "I can do well for her, and you say she has no one. I will have two daughters instead of one."

"You ain't a maverick no more, Janet," cried Joe, something shining in his honest eyes, "an' there ain't one of us but will bid ye godspeed. Ef ever a lone little child was worth a father's love an' care you be, an' the blessin' of all us that knowed ye goes with ye."

And as she, with Rose and her father parted from the companions of the long wagon journey, they followed her with loving, tearful eyes, that little Maverick who had found a happy home.—Patience Stapleton in Youth's Companion.

THE CONVENTIONS.

Both the Democratic and Republican conventions met in Santa Rosa this week and concluded their labors of nominating their county tickets. Each party has put forward its very best men for the various offices. As the voting strength of each is about equally divided the contest will be narrowed down to one of personal popularity. Sonoma has been most fortunate in chosing its public servants the past ten years, if we except the present extravagant Board of Supervisors. The offices have been about equally divided between the two great parties. At the present time we have a Republican and a Democratic Superior Judge, the District Attorney is a Republican, the county Clerk a Democrat, the Superintendent of Schools a Republican, the Auditor a Democrat, the Sheriff a Republican, the Coroner a Democrat, and so on all the way through the list of county officers. Some of these got in by the "skin of their teeth," while others received majorities of between 400 and 500. For instance, Treasurer Stofen (Democrat) received over 450 majority at the last election, while Sheriff Colgan (Republican), got over 500 more votes than his Democratic opponent. Now, these figures go to prove that the voters of Sonoma county, regardless of party, indulge in scratching to a fearful extent. It is a hobby with them, which, while it may not meet with the approbation of professional politicians is a mighty good thing for the tax-payer, as it compels both parties to put forward their very best men for office, which in turn as a general thing ensures an honest and economical administration of home affairs.

THE ROMAN HIPPODROME.

John Robinson and His Ten Combined Shows Coming to El Verano.

One of the features of the great Robinson show are the wonderful races which take place on the vast hippodrome track. They embrace two and four-horse chariot races flat races, standing races, break neck steeple races, ludicrous sack, wheel-barrow and obstacle races, camel and elephant races, greyhound races, donkey races, ostrich races, giraffe races in sulkies, monkey races, children's flat, hurdle, pony, donkey, jockey, flat and chariot races, male and female jockeys and charioteers. Over sixty thoroughbred horses and minature shetland ponies and scores of male and female jockeys and boy and girl riders take part in these wonderful and exciting races.

Narrow Escape.

Wednesday afternoon, Henry Batton of Bennett Valley, while sleeping in a low hammock, near the family residence on his father's farm, was suddenly awakened by a loud buzzing noise, and beheld to his great astonishment and alarm an immense rattlesnake coiled on the ground beneath him, in the act of striking with its deadly fangs. Acting with great presence of mind he made a dexterous spring backwards, and landed beyond the reach of the venomous reptile; then repairing to the house he returned with a gun and soon dispatched the serpent. Upon measurement "his snakeship" was found to be 40 inches long and larger in the middle than a man's wrist. It had eight rattles, the customary button, and weighed several pounds. Young Batton had a narrow escape, and says that before hearing the buzzing sound he was aware in an intuitive manner that something was near him.—Santa Rosa Dem.

The World Enriched.

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known, as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to clense the system gently in the Spring time or, in fact, at any time and the better it is known the more popular it becomes.

SANTA ROSA LETTER.

The Latest Venture at Boomtown--The Fruit Crop--Etc.

DEAR INDEX-TRIBUNE:

I have been unable to write for the last week on account of a little private disaster. Fire bugs have been numerous, and pro bono p b-lico I joined the "tar and feather club," an institution modeled after the "Council of Ten," and my first experience was to get my hands so bedaubed that I would have been unable to use them for some time to come, had it not been that by chance I ran across a copy of the latest venture at "Boomtown." There is an end to everything; but who knows where the end of this change of papers, titles, headings, editors, etc., will come. We hope soon, at all events. The latest is undoubtedly the climax thus far. How sublime and grand that announcement.

Perhaps the Whistle concluded it would not be safe to do much whistling after it had made such an attack against one of the most Enterprise-ing of our county journals. It ceased whistling once before suddenly after an attack on Sonoma's local paper.

The fruit crop in this section is about the same as other sections of the state, considerably below the average.

The two canneries here have been disposing of a carload of apricots each daily, for the past two weeks. They are shipped from San Jose principally.

Most of our institutions of learning open this week, which will mark the return of many families, who are at present absent from town on camping tours.

The weather the past twelve or fourteen days has been excessively hot. The mercury played all around and above the 100 degree mark. However, it has turned cooler and is becoming pleasant.

Kind regards to McGinty and the rest of the "Knights of Faber."

His Son Cured.

Mr. W. H. HINMAN, a prominent and influential citizen of Mt. Vernon, Ill., writes under date of March 11, 1890: "One bottle of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) cured my son permanently of a stubborn case of Blood Poison that defied the best medical treatment available. I have recomended S. S S. to others for blood troubles and diseases of the skin, and have never known it to fail to cure in any case.

Blood Poison Cured.

I was troubled for years with a Blood Poison in its very worst form. I was treated by the very best physicians of Louisville Ky., and Evansville, Ind., but they failed to benefit me in any way. A few bottles of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) cured me sound and well. This was over four years ago, and there has been no return of the disease since, or any symptoms of it. I have recommended it to others for blood poison, and in every case they were permanently cured."

Take Care! There is Danger

In allowing inactivity of the kidneys to grow through neglect. The deadly shoals of Bright's disease and diabetes will wreck the goodly bark of health if it is allowed to drift rudderless upon them. The bladder, too, if inactive, and judicious medication does not speedily direct the helm toward the port of safety, will be whelmed by the quicksand of disease. In selecting a diuretic, let your choice fall upon Hostteter's Stomach Bitters, which stimulates the renal organs without irritating and exciting them, two effects to be apprehended from the unmedicated stimuli largely resorted to. These have a tendency to react prejudicially. The Bitters invigorate the kidneys and bladder, in common with the nerves and the digestive organs, and so afford lasting aid. It also affords dual assistance in preventing and curing intermittent and remittent fever. Biliousness, constipation and rheumatism it also subjugates.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable causing distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a taint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful attention and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet efficiently. It tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, banishes headache, and refreshes the mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. The directors of the Sonoma and Marin District Agricultural Society will please accept our thanks for a season ticket to the twenty-fourth annual fair of the association, which opens at Petaluma on August 25th and closes on August 30th. They expect to give an exhibition this year that will eclipse all former efforts.

The foundation is being laid for the main building of the Home for Feeble Minded Children. It is about three hundred yards from the former residence of Wm. McP. Hill. It will be built of brick and the front will be three stories in height; when completed it will present a fine substantial appearance.

The Occidental Hotel, Santa Rosa, has recently changed hands. It is now under the management of Major Tuttle, one of the most experience hotel men on the coast. Sonoma people visiting Santa Rosa should not fail to visit the Occidental and make Mr. Tuttle's acquaintance. He is a prince among hosts.

It having been reported that the Rev. Jas. E. Bailey of the M. E. Church did not possess all the necessary qualifications for performing the marriage ceremony, we desire to state that there is no fondation whatever for the rumor. He is a duly ordained minister and as such enjoys the same privileges as other divines. We make this statement in justice to Mr. Bailey, and for the benefit of those who desire the nuptial knot tied in the future.

A casual glance at a newspaper will show a list of men who helped to build the town. If you see a good-sized, live advertisement in the paper by each of the principal merchants, and a card from each of the small ones, you need not inquire as to the prosperity of the town—it's solid. But if you find the most extensive merchants not advertising their business, then you set it down as a fact that those who do not try to push their business and the town with its interests, have a hard time and an up hill journey all the year round.—Ex.

A SUCCESSFUL ELOPEMENT.

Albert Estes and Maggie Crilly Come all the Way from Glen Ellen to Get Married.

Wednesday afternoon about three o'clock a rig containing a young couple drove hurriedly to the Revere House. The lady was shown to a room, while her escort took the horse to a livery stable. Here he inquired the whereabouts of the office of a Justice of the Peace, and Justice Smith's office was pointed out to him. Hastily he mounted the steps and evidently had a favorable conference with his Honor, for both very soon were seen wending their way to the Court House, where a license was issued to Albert Estes of San Francisco, aged 24 years, to marry Maggie Crilly of Glen Ellen, aged 19 years. The nuptial knot was securely tied and the couple soon started on their return trip. They were evidently expecting pursuit from the young lady's irate parent, for after the ceremony the groom grew talkative and said that he didn't care now how soon the old man came along; that the deed was done and couldn't be undone, but that he had been very much afraid that they would be overtaken and the ceremony prevented.—Napa Register.

City Trustees Meeting.

The Board of City Trustees met in regular monthly session last Wednesday evening. In the absence of President Poppe, Trustee Wegner presided.

After the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting, the Street Committee reported that Fifth-street East had been repaired and asked that the work be accepted. So ordered.

The Committee on Fire and Water and the Committee on Ordinances asked for further time to make reports. Granted.

The application of R. D. Moore for a special license and the appointment of a night watchman was received and laid over until next meeting.

A letter was received from the General Manager of the S. F. and N. P. R.R., in regard to the removal of the car house belonging to the company, which occupies a site on the Plaza, was read and ordered filed.

The Clerk was directed to furnish the State Board of Health with a copy of the Health Ordinance.

The following bills were ordered paid:

Wm. New, watchman, $4 50; J. K. Gross, watchman, $2 50; A. Baxter, watchman, $2 00; J. M. Cheney, rent, $5 00; F. Dubring, supplies, $1.50; Victor Jansen, street work, $30.75; Wm. Parish, street work, $7.50; total, $53.75.

It was moved by Trustee Litzius that sealed proposals be invited for about 250 yards of gravel to be delivered on or before the 18th inst.

The Board then adjourned to meet on Monday as a Board of Equalization.

Dried Wine Grapes.

The attention of vineyardists is called to the advertisement of Winegar Brothers, brokers and commission merchants, 106 Davis street, San Francisco, which appears in these columns. They are prepared to pay cash for future deliveries of dried wine grapes in carload lots of about ten tons each. The prices they are paying for the dried article is equivalent to $17 per ton for the grapes before drying. This is much better than selling at $8 and $10 per ton to the wine men. There is a good demand for dried wine grapes and it would be well for our farmers to inquire into this matter before contracting their grape crop for the wine press.

Mrs. F. M. Luttrell came near being killed one day last week. Miss Carrie P. Brown of Santa Rosa and Mrs. L. had been out riding and on arriving home drove to the barn to put the horse up, and when only partially unhitched the horse started, catching Mrs. Luttrell between the shaft and wheel and dragging her some fifty feet, when luckily the wheel struck a stump and raised the cart, releasing her from her perilous position. Had it not been for the stump she would surely have been dragged to death.

HYMENEAL.

The Nuptials of Dr. W. K. Vance and Miss Amalia Ehrlich.

The marriage of Miss Amalia Ehrlich and Dr. W. K. Vance, which took place at the pleasant home of the bride's parents near Sonoma on Sunday, the 3d of August, 1890, was solemnized by the Rev. James Bailey of the M. E. Church in the presence of the relatives of the bride and a few friends. Miss Lee Smith acted as bridesmaid and Mr. Otto Wagner as groomsman. The parlors were tastefully and artistically decorated with rare and beautiful flowers, ferns and evergreens. The fair young bride looked sweet and modest in an elegant bridal costume of heliotrope with bridal vail of tulle and orange blossoms. A smile of contentment rested upon the face of the groom as he answered, "I will." After the ceremony the guests were invited to partake of a sumptuous cold collation consisting of ham, chicken, turkey, tongue and a variety of delicious salads, with coffee and cream, three kinds of cake, ice cream and a merry round of sparkling champagne. After receiving the appropriate and hearty congratulations of the relatives and friends the happy bride, attired in a becoming and appropriate traveling dress, escorted by the handsome groom proceeded in a carriage to the railroad depot at El Verano and took passage for San Francisco, where they spent several days of their honeymoon at the Baldwin. They returned on Wednesday and commenced housekeeping in the pleasant town of Sonoma. We wish this worthy young couple a long life of true happiness. May sweet flowers cling around the matrimonial path and peace and plenty crown their declining years.

Oh take her and be faithful still,
And may the bridal vow,
Be sacred held in after years,
And warmly breathed as now.
Remember 'tis no common tie,
That binds the human heart,
'Tis only one that truth can weave,
And only death can part.

The young folks were the recipients of numerous magnificent and costly presents of which the following is part:

Elegant sideboard, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Muser, aunt and uncle of the bride; gold lined card receiver and boquet holder, Otto Wagner; handsome ladies dressing case, Fred Ehrlich, brother of the bride; hand painted china salad set, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Granice; set silver napkins rings of new design, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ehrlich, parents of the bride; set of silver knives and forks, Mrs. Otto Muser, aunt of the bride; handsome gold watch, from the groom to the bride; magnificent family Bible from Rev. George Vance, D. D., father of the bridesgroom of Dublin, Ireland; package of famous ulster linen handkerchiefs, sisters of Dr. Vance of Belfast, Ireland; case of California wine, Mrs. Henry Winkle of Sonoma; a handsome remembrance from Mrs. Robert C. Johnson of Buena Vista park, Sonoma; stylish cheffonier, Mr. and Mrs. Graf of San Francisco, aunt and uncle of the bride; very pretty set of tidies, Miss Lee Smyth; handsome parlor lamp, Mr. and Mrs. Henkenius; life-size crayon portraits of the groom and bride, Prof. Henry Baron.

THE DEMOCRATS.

They Meet in Convention and Put Forward their Very Best Men---A Doubtful Yarn---The Ticket.

The result of the labors of the Democratic County Convention which concluded its work last Tuesday evening was entirely satisfactory to Democrats throughout the county, if we except one delegate, whose liver was out of gear. This delegate, whom we will call Sam, became disgusted because he failed to carry some point and started to leave the hall. Before doing so, however, he was stopped by a friend, with the inquiry: "Why Sam, where are you going?" With a look of unutterable disgust on his face the disappointed delegate replied, "Well, I'm going down on the street corner and spit on the first dog that comes along and then gol durn it I'm goin' home." We tell this story as it was told to us by one of those funny Santa Rosa Republicans, and of course do not vouch for its truthfulness.

The following ticket, which Democrats pronounce a strong one, was nominated:

Senator—Robt Howe.
Superior Judges—J. W. Oates and Thos Rutledge.

SONOMA INDEX - TRIBUNE.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 9, 1890.

The Tintype Did It.

One day a man came over to our mine, which was about seven miles from Virginia City, and told us that a photographer had just opened up in the town. Next day being Saturday a lot of us knocked off at noon and went up to have our tintypes taken. Among the crowd was old Bill Lawson, who was the homeliest man you ever set eyes on. He was not only lopshouldered and humpbacked, but a bear had clawed his face and a fighter had bitten his nose and blinded him in one eye. It was a matter of remark that his looks would scare a panther, and we knew of men coming six miles to look at him; but, as the old man would never look into a glass, he couldn't realize how homely he really was. He might never have realized it had he not concluded to sit for a great big tintype—the largest the artist could make. When a finished picture was handed him he stared at it in blank surprise; then he scratched his head and rubbed his good eye and looked again. Then he came over to us and asked in a faltering voice:

"Pards, who is this chap in the pictur'?"

"That's you, Bill."

"Looks like me?"

"Exactly."

"Can't be no one else?"

"No."

"I'm as homely as that, am I?"

"Worse, if anything."

"You don't say! Look a-hyar, boys, how long hev you known this?"

"Two years."

"And never let on! Well, that was white of you and no mistake. Can't be any other feller, can it?"

"No."

"That's my mug—my blinker, my nose, my mouth and chin?"

"Yes."

"That's enuff. Good-by, boys."

"But where are you going?"

"Back to camp. See you later."

But he never did. He started for camp alone, and at the half way spot he sat down on a rock and suicided by a bullet into his head. On a flat stone lay the tintype, and with a piece of clay he had written on the stone:

"Gone to get a decent looking mug."—New York Sun.

Curious Definitions.

Many of the definitions in the English dictionary of 1626 are amusing, and some of them ludicrously absurd. The "pole" is described as "the end of the axletree whereon the heavens do move," a very primitive explanation. The "Hebridean wave" seems rather a poetic substitute for the Irish sea, and a "badger" is a still more extraordinary equivalent for a corn merchant—"one that buys corne or other victual in one place to sell it in another." Still funnier are some of the natural history definitions. A "baboon" is said to be "a beast like an ape, but farre bigger;" a "lynx" is "a spotted beast—it hath a most perfect sight, insomuch as it is said it can see thorow a wall." The account of the "salamander" reads like an elaborate joke—"a small, venomous beast with foure feet and a short taile; it lives in the fire, and at length, by his extreme cold, puts out the fire."

Turning to more general topics we have the "alphabet" defined as the "cross rowe of letters," and "an abecedarian" is "one who teaches the cross rowe."

Then from classic times the "Olympic games" are "solemn games of activity," and "Amphitrite" is not, as usual, the goddess of the sea, but the "sea" itself. "Mathematicks" and "mathematicians" are hardly dealt with. The latter means "a soothsayer," and the science as defined includes nearly all knowledge—"the arts of arithmetic, musick, geographie, geometrie, astronomy, astrology, cosmography," reminding one of the trivium and quadrivium of the school men of the Middle Ages. "Actresse" has a very literal and interesting signification—"a woman doer," but at this decade of the Seventeenth century there were no actresses in the modern sense of the term, the female parts being then taken by boys or young men. Women actors first appeared in 1660.—Chambers' Journal.

Thorough.

A close fisted man who wished to build a picket fence round his grounds haggled long with the village carpenter, an excellent workman, about the cost of erecting it. At last the carpenter agreed to build a certain sort of fence for a sum much lower than he had originally asked, and was told to "Go ahead."

When a dozen yards of the fence had been built the owner of the grounds saw that it was a much better job than he had contracted for.

"See here," said he to the carpenter, "you don't suppose I'm going to pay for such a high priced job as that, do you?"

"No, I don't," answered the mechanic; "you'll pay what you agreed to and I'll do the job to suit myself; I don't scant my work, even if I don't get full pay for it."—Youth's Companion.

HEALTHFUL EXERCISE.

Only a few months ago these romping, rosy-cheeked lasses were puny, delicate, pale, sickly girls. By the aid of Dr. Pierce's world-famed Favorite Prescription, they have blossomed out into beautiful, plump, hale, hearty, strong young women.

"Favorite Prescription" is an invigorating, restorative tonic and as a regulator and promoter of functional action at that critical period of change from girlhood to womanhood, it is a perfectly safe remedial agent, and can produce only good results. It is carefully compounded, by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate organization. It is purely vegetable in its composition and perfectly harmless in any condition of the system. It imparts strength to the whole system. For overworked, "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," housekeepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been faithfully carried out for many years.
